Aim of the Series:

This limited, finite series is based on the substantive outputs from a major, multi-disciplinary research project funded by the Wellcome Trust, investigating the meanings, treatment, and uses of the criminal corpse in Britain. It is a vehicle for methodological and substantive advances in approaches to the wider history of the body. Focussing on the period between the late seventeenth and the mid-nineteenth centuries as a crucial period in the formation and transformation of beliefs about the body, the series explores how the criminal body had a prominent presence in popular culture as well as science, civic life and medico-legal activity. It is historically significant as the site of overlapping and sometimes contradictory understandings between scientific anatomy, criminal justice, popular medicine, and social geography.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book emerged from the “Harnessing the Power of the Criminal Corpse” project at the University of Leicester. Generously funded and made open access by the Wellcome Trust (Grant number: 095904/Z/11/Z), this project brought together a team of interdisciplinary scholars to explore themes relating to crime, punishment, execution, magic, and the notorious dead. I would like to thank: all the members of the team for their collegiality and curiosity over several years working together; our Principal Investigator, Sarah Tarlow, who co-organised the 2015 conference at Leicester, “When is Death?”, that led to this book; the contributors who shared their wonderful research with us in this book; and Emily, Carmel, and everyone at Palgrave Macmillan, who were patient and helpful throughout the process.
