Last summer, my friend Kara and I had a unique opportunity. Instead of going on a package holiday as we (1) normally do, we decided to volunteer in Puerto Rico. Our friends and parents said it could be dangerous as we had to (2) the continent and we knew little about the place. However, we were determined to go. We went to a travel (3) who arranges holidays for volunteers and she organised everything. We ended up in a mountain village in Puerto Rico which (4) in a terrible storm. We stayed in a small hotel in the valley, so we had to cycle (5) to the village every morning. The ride was hard, and the work was even harder, but it was very satisfying. A couple of evenings a week we (6) a lift into the nearest town (7) we could have a delicious meal or go dancing with other volunteers. I have to say that Puerto Rican food might be the best I have ever tasted! We weren't ready to leave after two weeks, and our home (8) was a sad one. After this experience, I will never go on an ordinary holiday again.

Part IV: Reading

Read the article below and decide if the statements are True or False. (1.25 marks) (1.25 điểm)

TRUE if the statement agrees with the information

FALSE if the statement contradicts the information

On Saturday mornings I worked in the family shop. I started cycling down to the shop with Dad on Saturdays as soon as I was big enough. I thought of it as giving him a hand and so I didn't mind what I did, although it was mostly just fetching and carrying at a run all morning. I managed not to think of it as work and I looked forward to the bar of chocolate my grandmother passed me unsmilingly as I left. I tried not to look at her, I had reason to feel guilty because I'd generally already eaten some dried fruits or a sliver of cheese when no one was looking. As soon as I was fifteen, though, Dad said, "That's it, our Janet. You're of working age now and you're not coming to work unless your grandmother pays you properly." He did his best to make his chin look determined. 'I shall speak to her.'

The next Saturday, Gran called me into her little office behind the shop. I always hated going in there. She had an electric heater on full blast, and the windows were always kept tightly closed whatever the weather. There were piles of dusty catalogues and brochures on the floor. You're wanting to get paid, I hear, Gran said. 'Yes, please,' I replied. It was rather like visiting the headmistress at school, so I was very quiet and respectful. Gran searched through the mess of papers on her crowded desk, sighing and clicking her tongue. Eventually she produced an official-looking leaflet and ran her fingers along the columns of figures. 'How old are you?' 'Fifteen... Gran,' I added: for extra politeness, but she looked at me as if I had been cheeky. 'Full-timers at your age get forty pounds for a thirty-five-hour week,' she announced in such a way as to leave no doubt that she wasn't in favour of this. 'No wonder there's no profit in shopkeeping! So, Janet, what's that per hour? Questions like that always flustered me. Instead of trying to work them out in my head, I would just stand there, unable to think straight. 'I'll get a pencil and paper,' I offered. 'Don't bother,' snapped Gran angrily, 'I'll do it myself. I'll give you a pound an hour; take it or leave it.' 'I'll take it, please.' 'And I expect real work for it, mind. No standing about, and if I catch you eating any of the stock, there'll be trouble. That's theft, and it's a crime.'

From then on, my main job at the shop was filling the shelves. This was dull, but I hardly expected to be trusted with handling the money. Once or twice, however, when Dad was extra busy, I'd tried to help him by serving behind the counter. I hated it. It was very difficult to remember the prices of everything and I was particularly hopeless at using the till. Certain customers made unkind remarks about this, increasing my confusion and the chances of my making a fool of myself.

It was an old-established village shop, going back 150 years at least and it was really behind the times even then. Dad longed to be able to make the shop more attractive to customers, but Gran wouldn't hear of it. I overheard them once arguing about whether to buy a freezer cabinet. 'Our customers want frozen food,' Dad said. 'They see things advertised and if they can't get them from us, they'll go elsewhere.' 'Your father always sold fresh food,' Gran replied. 'People come here for quality, they don't want all that frozen stuff.'

Actually, she gave way in the end over the freezer. Mr. Timson, her great rival, installed one in his shop at the other end of the village and customers started making loud comments about how handy it was, being able to get frozen food in the village, and how good Mr. Timson's sausages were. That really upset her because she was proud of her sausages and she ungraciously gave Dad the money to buy the freezer. Within a couple of weeks, she was eating frozen food like the rest of us.

Janet was pleased to be helping her father when she first started her Saturday morning job.

ANSWER: A

B. Read the text and choose the correct answer to each given question. (1.25 marks) (1.25 điểm)

People do not give credence that a fourteen-year-old girl could leave home and go off in the wintertime to avenge her father's blood but it did not seem so strange then, although I will say it did not happen every day. I was just fourteen years of age when a coward going by the name of Tom Chaney shot my father down in Fort Smith, Arkansas, and robbed him of his life and his horse and $150 in cash money plus two California gold pieces that he carried in his trouser band.

Here is what happened. We had clear title to 480 acres of good bottom land on the south bank of the Arkansas River not far from Dardanelle in Yell County, Arkansas. Tom Chaney was a tenant but working for hire and not on shares. He turned up one day hungry and riding a gray horse that had a filthy blanket on his back and a rope halter instead of a bridle. Papa took pity on the fellow and gave him a job and a place to live. It was a cotton house made over into a little cabin, it has a good roof.

Tom Chaney said he was from Louisiana. He was a short man with cruel features. I will tell you about his face later. He carried a Henry rifle. He was a bachelor about twenty-five years of age.

In November when the last of the cotton was harvested, Papa took it in his head to go to Fort Smith and bought some ponies. He had heard that a stock trader there named Colonel Stonehill had bought a large parcel of cow ponies from Texas drovers on their way to Kansas and was now stunk with them. He was getting shed of them at bargain rates as he did not want to feel them over the winter. People in Arkansas did not think much of Texas mustang ponies. They were little mean. They had never had anything but grass to eat and did not weigh over eight hundred pounds.

Papa had an idea they would make good deer-hunting ponies, being hardly and small and able to keep tip with the dogs through the brush. He thought he would buy a small string of them and if things worked out he would breed and sell them for that purpose. His head was full of schemes. Anyway, it would be a cheap enough investment to start with, and we had a patch of winter oats and plenty of hay to see the ponies through till spring when they graze in our north pasture and feed on greener and juicier clover than they ever saw in the "Lone Star State". As I recollect, shelled corn was something under fifteen cents a bushel then.

According to the narrator, what was hard to believe?

- A. That young girl could take revenge on a man.
- B. That a girl could leave home at fourteen.
- C. That a man could be killed for so little money.
- D. That the girl did not avenge her father every day.

ANSWER: A

The girl's father

- A. was killed when the girl was fourteen.
- B. died in the Dardanelles
- C. was killed by a servant who worked in the house.
- D. was killed by a share fanner

ANSWER: A

The girl says her father...

- A. felt he could make money on the ponies
- B. wanted to sell some ponies.
- C. felt very sorry for the ponies.
- D. wanted to rise the ponies on his farm.

ANSWER: A

Which of these statements reflects the narrator's view of people from Arkansas?

- A. They did not appreciate Texas ponies.
- B. They were little and mean.
- C. They did not feed their own ponies properly.
- D. They were generally very fond of rim ass

ANSWER: A

What did the girl's father think about the ponies?

- A. They would be useful for hunting deer.
- B. They would be able to run as fast as dogs.
- C. They could be tied with string.
- D. They would eat only grass
